MOKENA SCHOOL TEACHERS OBSERVE EDUCATIONAL WEEK

The Mokena Grade and High School have been observing National Education Week by a series of educational activities. Monday the teachers visited other schools in order to get better acquainted with our neighbors and to observe the type of methods and devices of teaching used in other schools. Among the schools visited were Joliet High school and grade schools, Urbana and Champaign High schools, Orland Park high school and Frankfort and New Lenox grade schools. The teachers reported that their visits were both pleasant and profitable.

Wednesday and Thursday the rooms exchanged visits to present some educational project which it had been developing in connection with some school subject.

Today, Friday the parents and friends of the Mokena Students are invited to visit school to help us complete our observance of education week. Today's program includes visiting classes from 12:45 to 2:00 and visiting with the teachers and inspecting the pupils work from 2:00 till 2:50. The student council will assist in making you welcome and comfortable while you are there.

The visiting schedule follows: Primary room: 12:45 to 1:00, Story time 1:00 to 1:40 1st grade read, 1:40-2:20 Sp. and Lang.

Intermediate room: 12:45-12:50 Open. exercises, 12:50-1:15 6th grade English, 1:15-1:40 5th grade English 1:40-2:00 4th grade English.

High school room: 12:45-1:29 9th Eng., 1:25-2:00 Gen. Science, 2:00-2:50 Open house.

Harold P. Nutley Is Chairman of The Christmas Seal Drive

Announcement was made today that Harold P. Nutley, of the American Institute of Laundering, Joliet, has volunteered his services as General chairman of the 1941 Christmas Seal campaign. His appointment was made official by Dr. Gayle Hufford, Vice-Pres., in the absence of Dr. Matt Bloomfield, Pres., of the Will County Tuberculosis Committee.

Committee members are now being chosen by Mr. Nutley who will announce further detail plans for the drive within the next few weeks. The campaign opens November 24 and continues through Christmas.

"I was impressed," said Mr. Nutley, "with the fact that tuberculosis still leads numerically in the causes of death between the ages of 15 and 45. I believe Christmas Seals in years past have helped fight a good fight. Will County, like all other communities has its tuberculosis problem and at least once a year we should intensify our efforts to help solve the problem."

NEW LENOX PTA TO HOLD "DADS' NIGHT" NOVEMBER 14th

The New Lenox Parent Teachers Association will hold their regular meeting on Friday, November 14 in the school auditorium.

This meeting will be "Dad's Night." The New Lenox fathers will be our hosts. They promise us some entertaining songs from their men's Chorus. The program chairman Mrs. Wm. Penn has made arrangements for Mr. Orville T. Bright to speak on "Dad as a Pal to His Boys."

The Joliet Chapter of the Red Cross will furnish the New Lenox PTA with a First Aid instructor. Any women desirous to do this work may call Mrs. Anthony Vackar or Mrs. Melvin Whitaker.

Mrs. C. Burkhardt of Orland Dies of Heart Attack

Mrs. Chas. F. Burkhardt, nee Johanna Beck, passed away very suddenly in her home Sunday, November 9 at the age of 66 years 6 months and 22 days.

She was born in Orland Park on April 18, 1875, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Beck. On May 21, 1893 she was married to Mr. Chas. F. Burkhardt and has lived in the house east of Orland Park in which she died, for the last 48 years. Besides her husband, she leaves to mourn two sons, Charles E. and Phillip Burkhardt, one daughter Mrs. Hannah Duehr, 4 grandchildren, 3 sisters and a host of relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted Wednesday, November 12 at 1:30 pm from the late home and at 2 from Christ Ev. Lutheran church at Orland with Rev. Adolph Lach officiating. Interment was made in the Orland Lutheran cemetery.

School Children Visit Museum In First of Educational Tours

The first in a series of educational tours sponsored by the local PTA was made last Saturday when a bus load of 41 children left Mokena for the Museum of Industry and Science in Jackson Park.

Accompanied by Mesdames E. Ferguson, A. Steen, H. Spiess, R. Geuthner, W. Marti, L. Thiel, and T. Walsh, the children were conducted thru the various departments of the Museum by an official guide. The high lights of the tour included a visit to the coal mine and the showing of a film in technicolor picturing the cross country flight of a passenger airliner.

Judging from the enthusiasm of the children these educational tours will do much to realize the true objectives of our local PTA. Its members certainly deserve the hearty cooperation of all who are interested in building better citizens.

This Paper To Broadcast Local News Over WCLS

The News-Bulletin, Tinley Park Times and Orland Park Herald beginning with next week will feature interesting news items from the territories served by these newspapers over radio station WCLS. Arrangements have been made with this station through R. M. Holt, general manager for broadcasting items of interest as follows:

Monday for the Mokena News-Bulletin territory and Tuesday for the Tinley Park and Orland Park community news territories. Ted Blair, will handle these programs and they will be presented at 1:05 to 1:15 p.m.

Be sure to tune in and listen to the news of your community broadcast from this popular Will county radio station. This is the first time that the news from this section will be broadcast over the radio through the sponsorship of the local newspapers. This feature will be on the air every week starting with November 17.

WILL COUNTY COURT HOUSE GOES ON RADIO

A new feature has been inaugurated at the Will County court house by way of a marriage license interview along the lines of Juinn Ryan in Chicago. County officials give valuable information to the public during the broadcast which takes place at 11 a. m. Saturdays.

We are herewith printing some of the high lights of a highly interesting broadcast by Wm. Sorg, deputy county clerk for the past 20 years:

The County Clerk is also the clerk of the County Court, one of the several divisions of the work carried on by the County Clerk's office under the supervision of the County clerk.

As clerk of the County court, it is his duty to file, docket and attend all hearings and sessions of the County Court, with or without a jury, then record the various steps of each trial or hearing and spread the same in a word picture of each case.

There are nine separate dockets with their corresponding indexes, fee books and expanded records to be kept, that is, common law, criminal, juvenile (delinquent and dependent) mental cases (insane and feeble-minded), mothers' pensions, inheritance tax and special assessments.

The mothers' pensions are now being transferred to the Public Assistance Division of the State of Illinois. This took effect October 1, 1941 under recent laws passed by the Legislature under what is known as "Aid to Dependent Children" commonly called the ADC bill.

In the year November 1, 1920 to November 1, 1921 there were filed in the various divisions set forth 364 cases. During this period the majority of the prohibition cases were handled through the County Court.

In the year November 1, 1940 to November 1, 1941 there were 608 cases, resulting in 1442 hearings or trials, some of which take only a few minutes while others take the greater part of the day. This is broken down, 86 common law cases, 177 criminal cases with a resultant of 552 hearings, of which 23 were committed to the Illinois State Farm at Joliet, 24 to the Will County Jail; 37 were deprived of driving a motor vehicle and 19 automobile operators' licenses were revoked.

In the juvenile section there were 104 new cases resulting in 226 hearings, 55 delinquent boys and 16 girls and 37 dependent children taken care of. There were 145 children passed through the Juvenile Court this year.

There were 26 new mothers' pension cases with a resultant of 27 hearings and 60 new children were added to the mothers' pensions list this year. As heretofore stated, this now will be taken care of by the State of Illinois through the ADC.

In the mental division there were 146 insane cases with 290 hearings which passed through this Court. There were 18 new feeble minded cases with 37 hearings.

From November 1, 1920 to November 1, 1921 there were nine inheritance tax cases filed with a total of 24 hearings. This past year from November 1, 1940 to November 1, 1941 there were 51 inheritance tax cases filed with a total of 95 hearings.

The County Court is therefore a Court that deals directly, and closer to the home than any court. The Clerk of the Court is called upon in many instances to sit in conference with the County Judge, Probation Officer and State's Attorney relative to juvenile problems.

BUYS WINTER COAL SUPPLY WITH PENNIES

Do you ever hear about anyone buying their winter's coal supply with pennies? Well such an incident occurred in Orland last week when a patron of the I. N. R. Beatty Lumber Co., called up George Steinhagen, local manager and ordered 8 tons of coal for his winter's supply. The patron asked Mr. Steinhagen if he would take some pennies, the latter thinking there would be only a small amount of pennies. The coal bill came to $88. Great was the surprise of Mr. Steinhagen when his truck driver on his return from making the delivery, brought in a box containing $50 in pennies which were done up in rolls with 50 pennies to a roll. The total weight of the $50 in pennies was over 34 pounds. The next day the patron sent in $38 more in pennies completing his payment of the $88 coal bill.

RELIGION ON THE MARCH SAYS NOTED BISHOP

In a very stirring radio address which should be reprinted in every paper in the land, Archbishop Francis J. L. Beckman of Dubuque said in part Wednesday night that religion is on the march against war mongering. Here are some of the high lights of the broadcast:

"And let no man cry, 'religion in politics', the archbishop challenged. 'Moral issues are involved. When corruption, deceit, and communism entrench themselves in government it is time that religion steps in and calls a halt.'"

The archbishop praised those congressmen who "have fought heroically against power, pressure, patronage, and abuse," and have remained "true to their pledge of peace." He released from blame those congressmen who in the past voted for war measures "because they sincerely believed them peace measures of strict defense."

"These can yet redeem themselves with their people. It is those faithless politicians who have listened to the voice of Caesar instead of the people that we sound our warning. If you vote to send American ships into war zones you will be voting the deliberate murder of our boys."

"If you dare to repudiate your people, you in turn will be repudiated. I am satisfied now that religion will furnish that leadership. As a proof of that point you are getting a foretaste of it now. Religion is on the march."

Tinley Believes In Advertising

It is very seldom that the business men in a single community will run two pages of local advertising, but we point with special pride to that fact in this issue which contains two full pages of advertising by Tinley Park business concerns, and we ask our readers to carefully read over all of these ads and to take advantage of the many specials offered.

The business people of Tinley Park certainly are entitled to all the patronage that can be accorded them. These business concerns are all live wires and really have something of merit to offer to the buying public.

OLD BUILDINGS ARE VANISHING

The night wrecking crews are razing havoc with the old ramshackle Stollwagen buildings on the Front Street in Mokena. Piece by piece the old buildings are being dismantled without a trace of who is doing it.

If this wrecking process continues there will not be much left of the place except the vacant lot.

there have been a great many election contests pass through the County Court where the Clerk of the Court was appointed custodian of all the ballots cast in the several elections and after trial these cases have gone to the higher court for review. These cases have taken long weeks of trial and with the coming law taking effect January 1 of the permanent registration of voters, this also will be the added duties of the County Clerk.

My first official act, after a few days' coaching was to issue a marriage license to Emmett McGuire and Mildred Clark. Emmett is our present highway commissioner.

Frankfort Churches To Hold Union Thanksgiving Service

Special union Thanksgiving services will be conducted by the two Frankfort churches namely the Methodist and the St. Peter Evangelical on Thanksgiving Day morning commencing at 9 a.m. in the Frankfort Methodist church with Rev. G. Gerhold of St. Peter's bringing the Thanksgiving message. There will be special songs and music and a most cordial invitation is extended to every one in the community to attend these services.

This is the second year that union Thanksgiving services have been held by these two churches and the fine spirit of friendliness and mutual cooperation between these two congregations is indeed refreshing in these days of world chaos.

NOTICE!

As Thanksgiving comes next week Thursday on our publication day, we must go to press earlier and all adv. copy and news must be in by Tuesday noon.

Hunters Are Warned To Be Careful In Handling Game

With the hunting season on rabbits again open and local hunters out in force a word of caution comes from the American Red Cross with the suggestion that eager hunters think twice before bagging the lazy or slow rabbit—it may carry the deadly tularemia germ.

Dr. Albert McCown, medical director of the Red Cross points out that tularemia not only threatens the hunter, but the housewife as well. He advises those handling rabbits in dressing and cooking to wear rubber gloves. Happily, thorough cooking kills tularemia virus, removing possibility of infection.

To the hunters he gives this advice: Avoid the listless rabbit that makes too easy a target; chances are it is diseased, more than likely with tularemia. Although the rabbit is the most frequent carrier of tularemia, other animals carry the disease. Opposums, muskrats, skunks, and other rodent-type animals often pick up the infection from wood ticks, he said.

He lived in the Frankfort locality ever since he was five years old. He came here at that age with his parents from Germany.

He was married to Caroline Kopelman in 1881. His wife and three daughters, Mrs. Wm. Kampe, Mrs. Wm. Nieland and Mrs. Emil Schroeder preceded him in death.

Surviving are two sons, George and Henry, 8 grand children, one great grand child.

Funeral services were held Wednesday from the home of his son George with burial in Pleasant Hill cemetery. Rev. G. Gerhold officiated.

Thanksgiving Dates And Changes Of The Past

To The News-Bulletin Editor: Here are a few facts relative to Thanksgiving dates and traditions from the Mayflower Quarterly, Wm. Bradford proclaimed a Thanksgiving Service in December, 1621, the first national Thanksgiving proclamation was by the Continental congress recommending Thursday, December 18, 1777, as the appointed day.

Washington issued his first national Thanksgiving proclamation appointing Thursday, November 26, 1789; his second proclamation appointed February 19, 1795, the day of national Thanksgiving.

Adams issued two proclamations, the first recommending May 5, 1789, the second appointing Thursday April 25, 1799.

Jefferson issued no proclamations. Madison's proclamations were as follows: The third Thursday in August 1812; his second the second Thursday in April 1815.

With this last proclamation issued by Madison the practice of a national Thanksgiving with a proclamation was discontinued for exactly 47 years.

The following is taken from presidents' messages to congress. The practice of issuing a Thanksgiving proclamation was revived by Pres. Lincoln; his first proclamation appointed Sunday, April 13, 1862; his second Thursday, August 6, 1863; his third the fourth Thursday in November 1864.

Pres. Lincoln appointed the first Thursday in December 1865; November 29, 1866; November 28, 1867, and November 26, 1868.

Pres. Grant appointed November 18, 1869 and from that date to 1939 Thanksgiving was observed on the last Thursday of November, except Grant appointed July 4, 1876, a day of Thanksgiving.

Space will not permit me to go into further details. W. R. Holmes, Corinne, Utah.

Build Your Diet On Simple Foods To Lower Costs

Nutrition Study Reveals Ways of Keeping Healthy
On Limited Budget.

CHICAGO, ILL.—The average normal American needs from three to four pounds of food a day. He can buy it for an average cost of as little as seven cents a pound, even at today's prices. He can be amply and healthfully nourished on 25 cents a day, if necessary, if he will build his diet around a few simple, plentiful foods, according to a current low-cost nutrition study.

Millions of low income and moderate income American families are undernourished today because of wasteful spending of their food money, which in turn is the result partly of "over-civilized" eating habits and partly of lack of education in food values, the study says. Much of their precious food money goes for items of little or no food value—"faste-ticklers" and stimulants.

If the American housewife with a limited food budget will see that each member of her family over 10 years old gets a pound of whole-wheat foods and a pound—one pint—of milk per day she need not study elaborate tables of vitamins, calories, and minerals, this study by Northwestern Life Insurance company continues. The pint of milk, and a pound of entire-wheat flour, together with other "makings" for a loaf of bread, will cost 15 cents or less, and will supply most of the proteins, vitamins, and minerals needed for healthful vigorous living. If she will further enrich her bread with a couple of ounces of soy flour, and spend another 7 or 8 cents a day per person on potatoes and carrots, an occasional orange, or can of tomato juice, and a bit of fatty meat two or three times a week, her family can be completely nourished for about 25 cents a day per person, or seven dollars a week for a family of four, the study shows. Additional food money available can then be used to add variety and luxuries to this basic health diet—which, the study emphasizes, is not a so-called minimum-standard diet, but furnishes the various necessary food elements more bountifully than many expensive menus, and can be combined to make more than 50 different dishes.

Variety Is Expensive.
The average American family has avoided serious diet deficiencies in the past simply by eating a wide variety of foods. This is the easiest and pleasantest, but also the most expensive way, the study states. Where income is low and prices are rising, more reliance must be placed upon such low cost, high value combinations as wheat and milk, if a complete and healthful diet is to be maintained on a small food budget.

The whole-wheat grain, boiled or steamed, makes a tasty and sustaining breakfast cereal, the study states. Put through a home coffee grinder twice, the wheat becomes an inexpensive coarse flour which bakes into a delicious nut-like bread, rich with the flavor of the fresh-ground wheat grain.

Observing that the average urban American, even of low income, may not make this return to pioneer days with a coffee grinder in his steam-heated kitchenette, the study suggests that whole-wheat flour can be obtained at many groceries, together with numerous prepared whole-wheat cereals. Whole-wheat bread of the 100 per cent grade retails at 9 to 10 cents a pound in most cities, and day-old bread can frequently be bought at half price. For infants and young children, and for

Are These South America's 'Five Zones'?

When President Roosevelt revealed that secret information had been discovered for the redrawing of South America into five parts (one taking in the Panama canal), under German control much speculation was aroused as to the nature of these plans. The above map, based on the studies of Prof. Karl Haushofer of Munich, shows the five zones that he had mapped to be under German, Italian and Spanish domination. 1. Colombia reabsorbs all of the Central American republics, (also Cuba and West Indies, not shown); 2. Venezuela and the Guianas would be a German colony; 3. Peru, Ecuador and northern Bolivia would be under Italian influence; 4. northern Brazil, nominally independent; 5. Argentina, Chile, Uruguay, Paraguay, southern Bolivia and southern Brazil, as part of "Greater Germany."

oldsters with weaker digestive tracts, the study recommends the "enriched" farina, and the new "enriched" white loaf, which gives almost the same food values as whole-wheat bread.

Present defense prosperity is very spotty, the study states, and has boosted the income of many families who previously could scarcely spare 25 cents a day per person for food, while at the same time millions of other families with fixed incomes find their purchasing power sharply reduced by soaring prices. Still greater rises in living costs seem inevitable, unless adequate large-scale efforts are made to control cost elements. Extraordinary demands due to the war and to defense preparations are likely soon to be reflected in the prices of milk and other dairy products, the report observes.

'Sells' Whole Wheat.
A promotion campaign to "sell" the American public on the value of whole-wheat is suggested by the report, along the lines of the dairy campaign, which has been promoting greater use of milk. With an embarrassing surplus of wheat on hand, present U. S. consumption of wheat products averages only 6½ ounces per capita. If this could be increased to a pound of entire-wheat products per capita, plus a pound of milk, the health and vitality of the nation would climb and our wheat surplus problems would be largely solved, the study states.

Such a wheat promotion campaign should not only broadcast the scores of tempting ways in which whole wheat can be served, says the report; it should also see that whole wheat is available through the family grocery store. In many localities at present, wheat can only be obtained at a feed store or flour mill.

Other low cost foods which can be interchanged with the basic diet of whole wheat and milk for the sake of variety are oatmeal, and barley, used as cooked cereals or mixed in with the whole-wheat flour; also corn bread and corn meal mush, potato soup, and navy beans.

Lifetime Is Spent In Constant Search For New Products

MINNEAPOLIS.—A 76-year-old Minneapolis scientist has been working for 35 years to keep 20,000,000 people warm in winter and cool in summer. And it all started because he realized a youthful ambition to help the nation's farmers reduce their threshing costs.

When George H. Ellis was 16, and a mechanic at Sauk Centre, Minn., during the eighties, high threshing costs were ruining farmers. So he invented a machine to make binder twine out of straw. This reduced threshing costs and saved farmers many times the $10,000 he received for the invention.

In 1906, necessity of utilizing waste products from his twine manufacturing process sent Ellis on another search. This quest resulted in the first insulation board ever produced—out of flax straw fibers too short to be made into twine. He formed his own company to develop the new product but it took a full-time salesman 18 months to sell the first insulation board to a home builder.

Flax became difficult to obtain, so resourceful Mr. Ellis substituted wood fibers for straw and a new worldwide board insulation industry was conceived. Estimated value of the 34 different companies which grew out of his invention is now $150,000,000. More than 20,000,000 square feet now are in use, mainly in homes insulated against heat and cold.

Government Commission.
Retiring in 1916, Ellis soon grew bored, then accepted a commission from the U. S. government for research in Panama. He later engaged in private research all over the world. In 1924 he joined Minnesota and Ontario Paper company's insulate division as consultant engineer, the post he still holds.

Necessity for a preservative for insulation board next resulted in one of the inventor's most dramatic and productive researches. Exhausting all available library material on preservatives he decided to consult scientists at the Smithsonian institution in Washington, D. C.

Like a detective hot on a clue, he followed tip after tip until his interest was aroused by the institution's ancient Egyptian mummies. Searching for the secret of their remarkable lasting qualities he learned that asphalt-dipped bandages used for wrapping the dead and their similarly treated caskets had much to do with their preservation. The result was asphalt-treated insulate board with its preservative qualities, particularly against moisture condensation.

Although he has 150 patents and a lifetime of research behind him, Ellis is working on new industrial developments which he prefers to keep secret.

Army Uses Substitutes

For Strategic Material
WASHINGTON.—In its constant efforts to cut down the use of strategic and critical materials formerly used in the many articles of supply and equipment it procures for the army, the quartermaster corps is developing as many substitutes as possible, the War department has announced.

In a great many items tentative specifications are established for use of these substitutes.

Congressmen Are Puzzled by the Political Picture . . . Administration Prepares for Post-War Problems . . .
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—The average Republican congressman is baffled, and the average Democratic member of the house (or senator who must face the voters in 1942) is bewildered as he contemplates the political picture.

The political picture to him, of course, revolves around his own district—or state if he is a senator. There are some important questions outside his district or state, naturally, but it is the situation respecting the voters who will see HIS name on the ballot that is vital.

There are no landmarks to guide him—no historical experience on which to draw. Some of the old-timers went through the 1916 and 1918 campaigns, and most of them remember them. But they are of little help.

No one dreamed, at this time in 1915, that the presidential election of 1916 would turn on peace and war. Few realized, even by October of 1916, that most of the Eastern states would vote normally, and that most of the Western states would change on the "keep us out of war" issue.

Right now—just a year before the election, is the time most congressmen begin to take stock so as to make sure of being retained in office. It may seem a bit early to the layman, but it isn't a mite too soon.

To be re-elected in November it is necessary for a member of the house to be renominated before that. His primary may come as early as March, though it may be as late as October. But for all of them the lines have to be made, the organization perfected, the proper workers reserved, and the dangerous would-be opponents appeased, a LONG TIME before the primary.

Otherwise the nation may suffer the loss of the services of the aforesaid congressman. This might not be very tragic to us onlookers in some instances, but it is important to the statesman in question.

Problem Is Acute

For Republican members from what might be called doubtful districts the problem is acute. It is almost impossible to forecast what sentiment on arming ships, repealing the neutrality act, and actual war will be next spring, in primary time, and next fall, at election time.

Bear in mind that it is of not the slightest value, so far as a guarantee is concerned, what sentiment in any congressional district is NOW. If the congressman has a lopsided district, with a heavy majority for the sitting member's party, then it becomes of the greatest importance what the sentiment will be at primary time. If it is a close district, as so many are, the relative value of election-time sentiment becomes more important.

To illustrate that one must be a prophet, rather than a census taker. Certain congressional districts went heavily for Wilson in 1916 on the "keep us out of war" issue, then voted heavily AGAINST their sitting members in 1918 because those members had voted to keep us out of war in April, 1917, and reversed themselves a third time in 1920 and 1922, by which time these particular districts were disgusted with everyone who had anything to do with getting us into the war!

That can happen again.

Preparation for Post-War Period

Without the slightest intention of minimizing the war effort, much serious work is being done inside the administration, and in contact with manufacturers outside it, with respect to the post-war problem.

Meetings are being held every few days to study this problem. Business is being warned by those inside its own ranks that private capital MUST provide jobs in plenty, after the shooting stops, or else the government will take over.

In brief, the "make work" campaign of the New Deal after President Roosevelt was inaugurated, in 1933, when there was so much talk about raking leaves, will not be a patch on government spending to make jobs after this war is over IF jobs are badly needed.

It is rather startling to contemplate how many jobs will be needed when that time comes. In other words we are all looking forward eagerly to peace, but when it comes it will present the most baffling problems the American people have ever faced.

For one thing, and there is no use kidding ourselves about this. There will be the returned soldiers. For there is going to be at least one huge expeditionary force (it probably will be small at first, but so it was in the last war, when General Pershing took a division to France. The war ended with 2,000,000 American United States soldiers in France and 2,000,000 more under arms in the United States ready to go).

Cuts His Throat In a Trap Under Bridge; Rescued

Firemen Risk Their Lives
To Extricate Him From Perilous Position.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—A bloody, all-night rendezvous with a death that wouldn't come ended with the spectacular rescue of John L. Evans from the massive framework of Golden Gate bridge.

His throat and arms badly cut, the husky, 39-year-old man who courted death was helped from a precarious position 280 feet above the waters of San Francisco bay while boats cruised slowly below.

Bridge riggers, painters and firemen—some with safety ropes and some without, risking their lives—worked more than an hour to tie a line around the man, swing a ladder-net beneath him and encourage him to wriggle cautiously from the steel network into which he had crawled a few feet underneath the span's six lane roadway.

Suffers From Shock

At the end of the inch by inch removal, Evans was assisted back over the sidewalk rail, near one of the great towers, and then collapsed. Hospital attendants said Evans was suffering from shock, exposure and loss of blood, but predicted he would recover.

Lieut. N. Schou of the fire department said the man evidently climbed over the bridge rail late the evening before and slashed his throat and wrists in an attempt at suicide. Why he had not slipped into the bay was unexplained.

Discovered by Soldiers

His plight was discovered by two soldiers who heard screams as they walked across the bridge. They also found a coat which contained this note: "I have taken my own life, due to ill health and despondency." It was dated October 10 and signed "John L. Evans."

Mrs. Prudence Evans, a nurse, said her husband, a city meat inspector, had suffered a nervous breakdown and was on leave of absence. She had reported to police that he was missing.

Of the more than 30 persons who have plunged from the 35 million dollar bridge, only one has lived—Miss Cornelia Ierland. She still is in a hospital.

Girl Inherits Estate, Then Father Really Dies

DETROIT.—The story of a man declared legally dead six years ago by a court of Chicago, Pa., was told here following his actual death by a daughter who had inherited his estate.

The daughter, Mrs. Thelma Ritzert of Chicago, was called here by police after 68-year-old George Fox, realizing he was fatally ill, asked that she be summoned. Fox, who had worked as a department of public works truck driver, died at Receiving hospital a short time before Mrs. Ritzert and her husband arrived.

Police said they learned that Fox had made a pact 13 years ago with Charles Kibler, rooming house proprietor, to keep secret his identity.

Mrs. Ritzert, amazed by the story of her father's secluded life in Detroit, told police "we had given him up for dead long ago when we could not locate him, and never heard from him."

"Shortly before the court awarded his estate, mainly life insurance, to mother, she died," Mrs. Ritzert said. "I then inherited it. Imagine my surprise finally to hear from him, like a ghost out of the past. And then to come here and find him dead—really, it seemed, a second time."

Woman Pilot Will Hunt

Mayan Giants in Jungle

PALENQUE, MEXICO.—Mrs. Karen Shields, pilot-archaeologist of Crescenta, Calif., is organizing an expedition to penetrate the Central American jungle in search of a tribe of Mayan giants, long reputed to exist there.

Five previous expeditions have made the same attempt but no members ever came back.

Mrs. Shields, an apparently frail, blonde woman, believes that her tiny stature, blonde hair, blue eyes and very white skin may command the awe of the Mayans she hopes to find.

Mrs. Shields' apparent frailness is belied by the fact that she flew a plane here from her California home. She spent her entire girlhood on a huge plantation, bordering Campeche and Guatemala, and just on the outskirts of the "forbidden country."

She has made a lifetime study not only of the Mayan civilization and the Mayan race, but also of all jungle lore.

Appetite for Coffee Is

Fatal to New York Man

NEW YORK.—An attempt to make coffee, in the absence of his wife, was believed to have brought about the death of Edward J. Kelly, 44.

Kelly, brother of Patrolman John A. Kelly, who lives in the same building, apparently started to make coffee, turning on the gas but failing to light it early in the morning. Police listed the death as "probably accidental."

Doctor's Will Erases

All Outstanding Fees

BROCKTON, MASS.—Patients of the late Dr. Alfred C. Smith, who practiced here for more than 40 years, were pleased to learn that his will contained this clause:

"I hereby release any and all patients of mine from any debt or debts on my books on account to be due me from them at the time of my decease."

Beads Cat Finds Are Real Pearls

Mistress Gets $400 Reward For Their Return.

RYE, N. Y.—Mrs. May Birdsell, a blonde housewife, told friends how she "almost dropped dead" when she discovered that a string of beads she had lifted from the claws of her kitten and had worn carelessly for three days consisted of real pearls, valued at $7,500. She nearly wept, she said, when she recalled that the kitten which had brought her the necklace had been an unwelcome guest at her home at first and that three months ago she tried to give it away.

The discovery that the beads were pearls came when Mrs. Birdsell read an advertisement by Mrs. Elgood M. Lufkin offering a $500 reward for the necklace, which she had lost.

The advertisement said the necklace had a strand of 24 pearls and another strand of 107 and when Mrs. Birdsell, her fingers trembling, laid the beads on the kitchen table and counted 107 pearls, she knew they were the lost jewels. The strand of 24 was not found.

She saw the kitten playing with something on the sidewalk in front of her apartment. The cat apparently had dragged the beads from the street.

Because the necklace was not found intact—the other strand apparently having been lost when a car ran over it—Mrs. Birdsell did not receive the full reward, according to officials at the Albert R. Lee company, where the jewels were insured, but she received $400.

Love Scenes in Movies

Arouse Bushmen's Anger

DARWIN, AUSTRALIA.—Twenty Arhem natives walked 400 miles to see their first moving picture at Darwin, but they became so disgusted at the love scenes that they left the show before it was finished.

Darwin police said none of the natives wanted to see another movie. They didn't like the kissing.

News of the white man's new flickers was brought to the tribe by a young man named Jacala.

Jacala had served a sentence in a Darwin jail for the fatal spearing of a tribal chief. He could see the movie's neon signs from his cell. He wanted to see why so many persons went into a movie when he was released, but police hurried him out of town.

But Jacala returned to his tribe and told them of the white man's new entertainment. He persuaded the tribe to go to Darwin and see for themselves. It took the tribe 40 days to make the journey.

Other movie-going natives forgot to warn them of the kissing scenes, which are obliterated by native movie fans, who flash electric torches when the kissing and hugging starts.

Man Goes Fishing and

Gets Boy With Tall Yarn

TEANECK, N. J.—John Siansen Jr. went fishing and caught a boy.

He was unaware of his catch until Mrs. Siansen, on his return, looked into the rear compartment of the automobile.

There she found 11-year-old Richard Hoffman of the Bronx sound asleep and thoroughly entangled in Siansen's fishing tackle. Several fish hooks were imbedded in the boy's clothing.

Richard told police that he "went to bed in the Bronx and the next thing I knew I was walking along Route 4, near Teaneck."

Police couldn't decide whether the boy was a sleep-walker or a fibber. He told them he walked the mile and a half from Teaneck to Hackensack, where he crawled into Siansen's car and went to sleep. He was wearing pajamas under his clothing and had a small frying pan in his blouse.

Richard was turned over to his aunt, Mrs. Mary H. Hoffman, of Manhattan.

Woman's Half of House

Is Without an Entrance

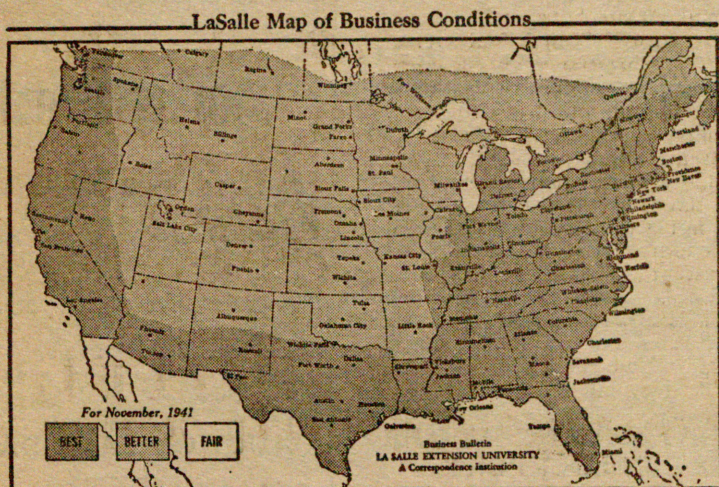

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.—Remember the one about the fellow who bought half a cow, then found he owned the end which had to be fed but didn't give milk?

Alexis Smith's problem is somewhat like that.

Alexis and her parents, the Alexander Smiths, agreed to split 50-50 on the cost of their new $10,000 home. So Alexis designed half of it, including the barbecue pit, playroom with a projection booth, and her bedroom. Her folks designed their half.

Running by after work the other night to see how the new wallpaper looked, she found she couldn't get in. The front and back doors are on her parents' half of the house.

Farm Outlook Best in Many Years

On the above map, the current improvement in farm conditions highlights the business picture throughout the country as outlined by the La Salle Extension University.

By L. G. ELLIOTT
President, La Salle Extension University.

CHICAGO.—The improvement in farm conditions, which already in the first eight months of 1941 had produced a total income gain to farmers of $1,201,000,000 over 1940 not including government payments, continues to indicate that this year will be the best of any year since 1920.

The income increase has been more than double from livestock than from crops—$850,000,000 for the former as compared with $351,000,000 for the latter. Harvests have been large and granaries are well stocked with crops that are selling for much higher average prices than have been received in over 12 years.

Farmers are well equipped to accomplish even more in the future than they have this year. The numbers of livestock on farms and ranches are close to the peak, and the animals are in good condition. Large quantities of cattle, hog, dairy and poultry products will be produced and marketed to meet the ever-growing consumer demand.

Vanished Men

By GEORGE MARSH

Penn. Publishing Co.
W.N.U. Service

THE STORY SO FAR: Six men traveled the Chibougamau trail and six men died. Later they were reported drowned. Murder is suspected. Garry Finlay, brother of one of the six; Red Malone, Mounted Police officers,

As Lise followed Corinne into the house to change into a bathing suit she wondered how far she could trust her—how much Corinne really knew.

They paddled slowly up the shore of the lake. The nose of the boat slid into the sand. Dropping her blouse and slacks in the canoe and adjusting her rubber cap, Lise stepped out into the shallow water followed by Corinne. Walking out to her knees, Lise made a long, shallow dive and swam away, revelling in the refreshing coolness of the water.

"Don't go so far, Lise!" called Corinne. "Stay here with me! I'm afraid to go out there!"

Lise turned back. "Great, isn't it, after this heat?" said Corinne, stretching on the sand. "Wish we'd brought our lunch!"

But the thoughts of the girl were of the rock a hundred feet away, at the edge of the beach. Had Finlay returned and left a note for her? And how was she to get it?

Lise waded out and plunged in again. Swimming in a wide circle she left the water opposite the quartz rock at the edge of the beach and casually walked past it. Her heart suddenly picked up its beat. The corner of an oilskin wrapper was visible. The letter was there!

She rejoined Corinne who said: "You know, this morning I asked Jules if he was going to bring charges against Finlay for murder when he went south. Do you know what he said?"

"I can't guess." "He said it wouldn't be necessary."

"Meaning?" "Why, that Finlay would disappear, I suppose. Lise, I'm afraid to stay here. I'm going to make Felix Blondell take me back with him. I want to get out of this and you should, too!"

Lise sat up. Her dark face was suddenly taut and desperate. "You remember what Jules told me about Felix Blondell?"

"Yes, it was rotten! And I think he meant it! He's as hard as stone. When Blondell comes, you sleep with a pistol under the pillow!"

"I will and I'll use it!" "I believe you would. He's vile when he's drunk and you know how they'll drink. He's due in a week."

Lise was planning how to get the note unobserved. At last she had an idea. She rose, took her blouse and slacks from the canoe and releasing the neck band of her bathing suit dropped it around her hips.

"What are you doing?" demanded Corinne.

"My swim suit's not dry. I'm going to spread it on that hot rock."

Lise slipped the suit to her knees, stepped out, got into her slacks and put on the blouse. Then she took the suit to the rock and spread it to dry. When Corinne rose, turning her back, and went to the canoe, Lise reached under the rock and hid the wrapped note inside her blouse, which was tucked into her slacks.

On the way back to the post Lise could feel the wrapped note inside her blouse with every stroke of her paddle. It comforted her. Hurrying to her room, she opened it and read:

"Dearest Girl:

"We're back but they've been hunting us so hard that we haven't moved in daylight. At least twenty canoes have been combing the shores looking for us. We move only at night. I can't write what I want to say. This note might be found. I can't tell you where I am or meet you now. Next week look for instructions. Pack a bag with clothes and wait for the word. Courage! All will come out if you are brave and I know you are. I'm still living those last moments on your beach. I love you, Lise Demarais! If Blondell comes before you hear from me, sleep with and always carry your gun. Try to be patient and wait for my message. It will be soon. Courage, brave heart! I love you!"

"Garry."

She threw herself on her bed and cried for sheer joy. He hadn't forgotten! He loved her.

CHAPTER XVII

The yellow orange of a moon that hung above the indigo ridges beyond Waswanipi was full. The moment had arrived. Wabistan had learned that the medicine-lodge was to stand in front of the great Medicine-Stone in a clearing on a certain island. It was one of the many places where the old sorcerers had invoked the spirits.

"He set his tent close to de scrub," Blaise explained, "so he go in and out and dey not see him."

"You say the mob will all be in front but not near the tent?" asked Red, as they ate their supper in their hidden camp.

"All in front but he will not let dem come near," said Blaise. "De spirit is shy and will not talk if Montagnais are close," he added with a grimace.

INSTALLMENT SEVENTEEN

and Blaise, half-breed guide, posing as surveyors, arrive at Nottawa to investigate. Isadore, rich fur man, is thought to have made a gold strike and aims to keep prospectors out. Later, they visit Isadore, rich fur man, at his magnificent home and meet Lise, his step-daughter. Finlay falls in love with her. They learn that Isadore's men with Tete-Blanche are hunting them. Several weeks later Lise went swimming with Corinne, her mother.

"And the Indians leave their canoes at the clearing?"

"Ah-hah." "So we land on the opposite side of the island, behind the tent?"

"Yes." "Then Garry and I wait at the edge of the clearing to back you and Wabistan up when the trouble starts?"

"You are in de bush by big Jack-pine. It will be black dere. Dey will not see you but you see and hear dem."

"Red," said Finlay, "this whole show is going to depend on the breaks we get. Blaise thinks it can be done. I'm not so sure, but it's worth trying. If it doesn't work, we're in a trap. We'll never get out of that island. But unless something happens pretty quick we can't last much longer on this lake, anyway."

"You're right, chief," admitted Red. "If Blaise is wrong, God help us! But what a dog-fight it'll be there in the moonlight!"

"It's one of the boldest and cleverest ideas I've ever heard of," said Garry. "We may have trouble justifying it at headquarters but we're committed now."

"I'll say it's an idea. But it may lose us our jobs, chief; and you close to promotion!"

"Our jobs won't be important if they bury us, Red. Tonight three more may be snuffed out on the Chibougamau Trail."

"What are you doing?" demanded Corinne.

The Waswanipi wilderness dozed under the spell of the full August moon.

One by one, dark shapes of canoes crossed a shimmering ribbon of moonlight bound for the island of the Medicine-Stone.

Long since Wabistan and his son had left. Garry and Red stood on the shore, silent. Finlay was wondering if the plane from the south was anchored to the buoys in front of Isadore's—wondering if he would ever again look into Lise Demarais' dark eyes, when Blaise touched him on the shoulder.

"All right! We go!"

The three men left their rifles in the Peterboro beached at the foot of a steep bank and worked across the small island.

"What a mob!" whispered Red. "Must be fifty or sixty! Where's Wabistan?"

"I don't see him, but he's there somewhere with his friends. He'll talk when the time comes!"

Near the Medicine-Stone stood the conjuror's tent.

"There's the medicine-lodge!" muttered Red. "Small, isn't it!"

"Red, I think I see Batoche—the bird with the hat pulled over his eyes!"

"The Isadore mob's all there, backing up Kinebik!"

"We've got to get closer," whispered Garry. "If anything starts we're too far away."

Inch by inch the two worked nearer to the clearing drenched with light.

"Look!" Red nudged the man beside him. "They're passing a bottle!"

Suddenly, silence dropped like a blanket over the clearing. The faces of the Montagnais were turned toward the medicine-lodge.

"Kinebik's in the tipi, Red! See it shake?"

Shortly there rose the muffled beating of the conjuror's caribou-hide drum accompanied by a low sing-song. The shell-rattle joined in and the beat quickened. The listeners in the clearing strained forward where they sat. Louder crooned the voice of the shaman in a rhythmic chant. The sorcerer was a superb mimic. His voice ran the gamut of the voices of the night.

The voice again ceased, and the audience sat in awed wonder. Then from the tent drifted maniacal sobbing. Creatures in torment shrieked their agony. Demons and fiends screeched and bellowed in a mad cacophony of horror. At last a voice rose through the octaves to a wail which chilled the blood as it died over the moon-bathed forest.

A silence so tense that it vibrated in the ears like sound, followed. Then a sepulchral voice startled the cowed Montagnais. A spirit was speaking!

"Montagnais, I come from the spirit places at the call of my brother, Kinebik. I have traveled far from the land where the sun sleeps. My brother's heart is sick. The little children are bewitched by the Evil Eye of the white men and die. Drive these white strangers from Waswanipi or the women will wail in the tips of the Montagnais through the Long Snows!"

Suddenly the painted walls of the medicine-lodge visibly shook and swayed. The conjuror was about to invoke another spirit voice. A low cough was cut off short and the skin tipi was again motionless.

Presently, a voice so shrill, so penetrating that it tortured the ears, quavered over the clearing. It soared thinner and thinner. Then it descended to moan and roar like a March drifter on the barrens, later to drop lower until it boomed with the sudden thunder of ice split by frost.

Then the voice cut high and clear through the silence. "Montagnais, I have heard the voice of Kinebik, the Wabeno, who speaks with the split tongue of the snake. It was no spirit who talked. The voice was his own. He is a false shaman who destroys the young men with the whiskey of Tete-Blanche."

There were startled murmurs of dissent. The voice went on.

"The white men were sent by the Fathers at Ottawa. Isadore fears them for he has broken the law and given whiskey to the Montagnais. If the white men are killed, the red coats will come and the Montagnais will be punished. The children are no longer sick. There was no Evil Eye. It was the lie of Kinebik, Isadore's servant. Why does he not answer? He is here in the tipi. He is afraid and is silent for he knows he has lied. Even now Tete-Blanche is here with whiskey to destroy the young men!"

The clearing was in a chattering uproar. In the murk Finlay and Red waited the outcome with drawn guns.

"My people, the true spirit has spoken and has gone! Why has not Kinebik answered? Have his words choked in his throat? Follow me and we shall learn!"

The old man strode boldly to the medicine-lodge. Crawling into it from the rear he re-appeared, dragging a limp shape. Wabistan rolled the body on its back. The moonlight shone full on the glazed eyes and the swollen face with protruding tongue of Kinebik.

The chief turned to those who had had courage to follow.

"Look, Montagnais, the lies of Kinebik have choked him! The spirit has punished him for speaking with a split tongue!"

Two men pushed through the circle of gaping Indians and bent over the conjuror. One of them, with white hair and features knotted with rage, turned to the group and cried in Montagnais:

"Montagnais, you are fools! Kinebik was strangled! It was the plot of the white men! They are here on the island! Hunt the men who killed Kinebik!"

"No!" shouted Wabistan. "It was the good spirit that choked the lies in Kinebik's throat!"

Instantly a milling mass of Indians surrounded Kinebik's body. There were cries of, "Kill the white men!" answered by shouts: "It was the work of the spirit! Kinebik was a false shaman!"

In the gloom at the edge of the clearing two men with cocked pistols listened. "Wabistan is safe!" said Finlay. "He doesn't need us now! Tete-Blanche will soon start to hunt us! We'd better meet Blaise at the canoe!"

They moved swiftly across the island but Blaise was not at the canoe under the steep shore. Finlay was cold with apprehension.

"What could have happened, Red? He should be here!"

"He's in trouble," said Malone.

"They'll follow the shore path soon, nosing for our canoe!" muttered Garry. "If they reach us, don't fire unless we're cornered. It will only draw the rest and we've got to get Blaise. God bless his foxy old bones! It was magnificent! He snuffed that shaman out without a sound!"

"Listen! They're moving this way now, along the shore!" "You're right, Red! Stand by this path and we'll club 'em with our guns! Don't fire unless they come too thick! We must get Blaise!"

Brush snapped up the shore. The hunt had started. A dry stick broke directly behind Finlay and he whirled with raised gun. There was a low "Shish!" A hand touched his shoulder. "We move quick!" whispered Blaise. "Dey are close behind me!"

LEAVES from Uncle Sam's Notebook

Roofing and Roof Repair

In late autumn, when the pressure of summer work is over and the rains or snows of winter are imminent, the mind of the householder turns automatically to the condition of his roofs.

MAKING SMALL REPAIRS

If shingles are missing here and there from a shingled roof, new shingles may be inserted if they are available. If they are not at hand, pieces of rust-resistant metal may be used, or even, in case of emergency, pieces cut from a tin can. When metal pieces are used for repair they should be painted on both sides and slipped under the shingles in the upper layer, taking care not to loosen any shingles in the process.

If small holes are found in metal roofing they can easily be filled with drops of solder; if larger holes exist they should be repaired by soldering over the hole larger pieces of the same kind of roofing. If soldering tools are lacking, use plugs of elastic roofer's cement for the small holes and cover the large ones with a piece of canvas (or several thicknesses of cement sacking). Use thick paint for an adhesive to fasten the canvas or sacking down, and cover also with several thicknesses of paint.

Sometimes it is found that a metal roof is riddled with small holes. If it is not feasible to re-roof, paint on a thick application of bituminous or asbestos coating, such as is often used on roll roofing or composition shingles when they have grown fuzzy from use.

For repairing a built-up roof, several steps are indicated, as follows:

1. Sweep aside loose gravel or slag for later use;
2. Cut out the various layers of felt and tar coatings, taking care not to rip the coverings;
3. Cut the layers out in steps, so that the bottom layer has the smallest area;
4. Apply the patches so that each succeeding layer will lap over the next lower by one to two feet. (This will prevent a hump when the patch is completed).
5. Embed each layer in hot tar or asphalt;
6. Pour a generous amount of hot tar over the last patch, for embedding the gravel, which is then swept back to place.

FOR A NEW ROOF

When a new building is under construction, or when an old one must be completely re-roofed, the question arises of what type of roofing to apply. The answer to this question will depend upon what the owner can afford to spend, the size and type of the building and the shape of the roof. Rigid shingles are very durable.

Wood shingles, if of a durable wood and if they are properly laid, are both durable and attractive. They are, moreover, of comparatively low cost and have considerable insulating value. Slates, which make an extremely attractive and very long-lasting roof, may be had in a variety of colors. It must be kept in mind, however, that they are much heavier than wood shingles, weighing from 700 to 900 pounds per square (100 square feet), consequently the frame beneath them must be of stronger construction than for wood shingles.

Asbestos shingles, made by compressing asbestos filler and Portland cement under great pressure, are very durable and have the added advantage of being fire-resistant. They may be obtained in a wide variety of colors and surface textures.

Metal roofings are light in weight and, if their joints are locked or soldered, they may be used on nearly flat roofs without leaking. They are fire-resistant and, if properly grounded, are lightning-resistant, also. If not properly grounded they may increase risk from lightning.

As a general observation, it may be said that the first cost of the roofing is not the only thing to consider: Maintenance, repair, and probable length of service should also be considered.

The roofs of buildings in a farm group should harmonize in color. If at all possible, some insulating material should be used under all roofs. Such insulation renders buildings cooler in summer and in winter conserves fuel by keeping artificial heat inside.

For further information on roofing materials and practices, send five cents to Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., asking for Farmers' Bulletin No. 725.

For information on insulation, send ten cents, asking for Report No. 25, "Insulation on the Farm."

HOME HIDE TANNING

A recent government bulletin says that "depending upon the size of the hide, the kind of leather, and the tanner's prices and profits, the charge for tanning a hide with the hair on or making it into leather varies from $1.50 to $4.00 for calf-skins, and from 25 to 50 cents a square foot for hides made into harness, lace, or glove leather." Since it is so difficult and such a risk, home tanning is advised only for cheap skins and for making the coarser grades of leather.

UNION WITH CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—John 15:1-10.
GOLDEN TEXT—Abide in me, and I in you.—John 15:4.

Our lesson presents deep spiritual truths concerning our union with Christ—mystical, but practical; precious, but too often forgotten or neglected.

I. The Conditions of Union With Christ.

There is a sense in which union with Christ is entirely unconditional, one is either united with Him by faith or he is not. However, there are conditions for the fulfillment of all that such union carries with it. It is in that sense we use the word.

1. Cleansing (vv. 1-3). Christ is the Vine, and the believer as a true branch is united with Him. There is a oneness here which is difficult to express but delightful to receive and believe. He who is the Vine needs no cleansing, but the branch needs constant, daily purification by "the Word" (v. 3). Are we permitting God's Word to keep us clean? Only if we are reading it, studying it, meditating upon it.

There is moreover a severer type of purging to which the husbandman subjects the vine that it may bear more richly, and that is pruning (v. 2). It may not be pleasant, my brother, but it is profitable, and remember whose loving and sure hand it is that wields the pruning knife (v. 1).

Some branches must be cut away altogether (v. 1) and burned (v. 6). They lack the evidence of life—fruitbearing—and must be destroyed. These words are evidently not written to dishearten true believers, but they are a solemn warning to those who bear a false profession of Christianity.

2. Abiding (vv. 4-8). The branch bears the fruit of the vine. It has no strength or ability of its own to bring forth fruit. The Christian cannot serve Christ without abiding, and if he does abide the life of Christ will show forth in His living and serving. There can be no union without abiding in Christ.

3. Obedience (vv. 9, 10). The hall-mark of character in a child is obedience. That is also true in God's household. There is no use in talking sweetly and piously about abiding in God's love unless we obey His commandments. The Christian who disobeys the teachings of God's Word regarding holy living and does not respond to the leading of the Holy Spirit shuts off the blessing of God in his own life and stops its flow out to others.

II. The Results of Union With Christ.

1. Purity of Life (v. 3). "Now ye are clean"—how refreshing our Lord's words sound to us as we live in a wicked and filthy world. We sometimes wonder if there are any pure lives anymore. Yes, there are—those whom the Lord has cleansed by His Word. Would you like to be clean? Turn to Him and to His Word.

2. Prevailing Prayer (v. 7). At first one wonders why our Lord put in that word about prayer, but it is evident that one of the fruits of union and fellowship with Christ must be intelligent prayer according to God's will, in the power of the Spirit, and certain of an answer.

Notice that the prayer promise here is absolutely unlimited, but that it follows an "if" which states a closely limited condition. Let us fulfill the condition and claim the promise.

3. Fruitbearing (vv. 2, 4, 5, 8). The fruit a Christian bears is the fruit of Christ who is the Vine, but as the branch he does have the joy of bearing "fruit" (v. 2), "more fruit" (v. 2), and "much fruit" (vv. 5, 8). The Christian's phraseology can be borrowed, the Christian's service imitated, but his fruit produced only by abiding in Christ.

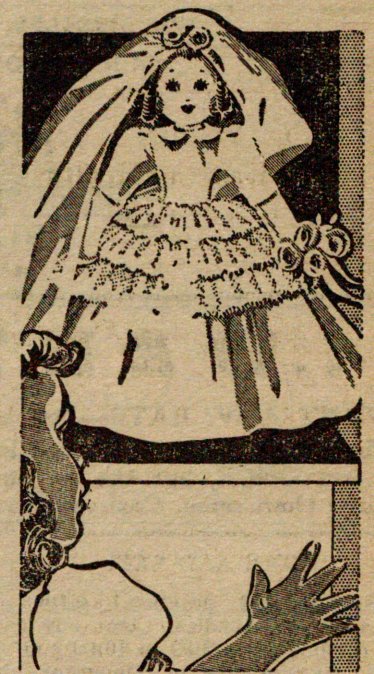

4. Abiding in Love (v. 10). We have been talking about abiding all through our lesson and it may seem strange to list it as one of the results of union with Christ, yet it belongs here. Our Lord said (v. 10) that the cleansed and obedient disciple should abide in His love, even as He obeys the Father and abides in His love.

What a picture that is. Christ, the One who knew no stain of sin (II Cor. 5:21), always perfectly obedient to the Father (Heb. 10:7), who knows complete and perfect fellowship with the Father, reaches out His loving arms and draws the believer into the circle of that blessed union and love.

'Only Thee'

No one can ever become quite solitary, quite poor, quite miserable, who can truly say "Lord, if only I have Thee." That is just the time when God makes his consolation most gratifying and abundant, when we through distress of body and soul have turned from all temporal things to Him, and have learned that royal, overshadowing "only thee."—Theodore Christlieb.

ORLAND PARK

The Holy Name Society of St. Michael's church will sponsor a poultry card and bunco party in the church parlors at 8 p. m., Saturday November 15th. Everyone is invited.

The American Legion Auxiliary will meet Friday evening, Nov. 14 in the Legion Hall.

"Bug" Doctor and "Moon" Mullin have returned from their jaunt to the southland. They got as far as Key West and travelled 4,240 miles thru ten states in the two weeks they were gone. They say the south is all right for those who like it, but that Orland Park suits them just fine.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Maddox and daughter Lois attended the 50th anniversary Golden Jubilee of the Julia Gay Memorial Methodist church in Chicago Sunday. This is the same church that Mrs. Maddox attended before coming to Orland Park and in which she and Mr. Maddox were married.

Mayor Walter Schussler, Jr., is still confined to his home with a severe attack of malarial fever. During his disability, Alderman I. A. Cleveland is acting mayor.

The Legion dance held last Saturday evening was well attended and proved a very enjoyable affair.

With the arrival of the hunting season, Orland hunters are advised to restrain their enthusiasm and not overstep the hunting laws. They are well to remember that it is unlawful to hunt or discharge firearms within the corporate village limits or to carry a loaded gun in any of the surrounding forest preserves.

A special Thanksgiving service in English will be held in the Christ Lutheran church Wednesday evening, Nov. 19th at 8 p. m.

A meeting of the executive board of the W.S.C.S., of the Methodist church was held in the church parlors Tuesday evening.

The Orland Township Home Bureau met at the home of Mrs. Vivian Maue last Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Mary Wright, Home Bureau Advisor was the guest speaker. She announced two projected activities, the major project taking up Home Decoration, Curtains and Drapes and a minor project dealing with special decoration of Christmas cakes.

The Bureau will hold a special get-together family night Nov. 26 in District 136 School Building. A prominent speaker has been secured and the balance of the evening will be given over to recreation under the supervision of a recreation leader from the State University. Refreshments will be served.

The Goodwill Industries invites you to attend a meeting at their headquarters at 2425 South Wallace St., Chicago, Monday, Nov. 17 at 2 p. m. There will be a special program by the handicapped people whom this institution serves and this will be followed by a tour of the institution and a social tea. Come and bring your friends and see first hand the wonderful work that is being accomplished by this institution among our physically handicapped brethren.

Members of the Orland Methodist church will be glad to earn that next Sunday services will be conducted in the auditorium proper of the church. While not entirely completed, work has progressed to a point where services will be conducted in comfort.

Every member of the choir and all those interested in participating in the Church Christmas Musical program are urged to attend a special rehearsal next Friday at 8 p. m.

Mrs. Louise Koehler, widow of the late Gebhardt Koehler, is ill with heart trouble.

FLY THE FLAG

This article is not to be construed as a criticism or censure of any person or persons in our community, but it is written with the idea of calling attention of everyone that reads it to a general condition that exists among us.

It is a wonderful privilege to be an American and live in our beautiful peaceful community in this grand old country of ours. It is a wonderful privilege to see the Flag of our country floating in the breeze each star in its field of blue, each stripe of red and white a symbol of the magnificent heritage of freedom and tolerance which is ours.

There is probably not one among us who does not instinctively thrill with a feeling of pride when they behold the rippling folds of Old Glory flaunting its message of liberty, of peace, of love and of the confidence and loyalty of a united and God loving and God fearing people.

Yet how few of us avail ourselves of this privilege. A startling fact was recently brought out that only a comparatively few of our homes possess our National Flag. Of these, very few remember to display it on the occasions when it is most fitting to do so. On Armistice Day—a day of national significance, a day on which every American should bow his head in thankful memory of those loyal hearts who sacrificed their lives for the ideals that the flag stands for. Today but a handful of our citizens availed themselves of the privilege of displaying that flag for which these brave men died. We feel this was not because of lack of love of country, or pride in its glorious emblem, or of respect to our fallen heroes, but rather to our own thoughtlessness, engendered by that sense of security that citizenship in our great nation automatically brings.

Citizens of Orland Park! Be proud of your flag and the deals for which it stands. Let no opportunity pass by to fly your country's colors and tell all the world you are proud and thankful to be an American.

IN MEMORIAM

CHARLES HILL. In fond and loving memory of our dear uncle who left us suddenly four years ago November 13, 1937.

Precious Uncle, he has left us Left us yes for evermore, But we hope to meet our loved one On that bright and happy shore. Lonely the house and sad the hours Since our dear one has gone But of a brighter home than ours In Heaven is his home.

ENDERS FAMILY

PALOS PARK

By DOROTHY ROBSON

The barn dance party sponsored by the Palos Juniors which was held in the Village Hall Friday night was a great success. Never has such an audience been in the Hall since its dedication. It was a cold and snowy night, but people come from all the surrounding towns and had an enjoyable evening of dancing and appreciated the refreshments served. The Junior Girls want to thank everyone who in any way helped make it a success.

The hunting season is open and is now in full swing. Early Monday you could hear the gunshots as the hunters were looking for pheasants. There isn't so much property left in Palos Park any more due to so much forest preserve. George Robson had a lot of hunters stop at his place and he went out with them. Albert Robson, Charles Schefflein, John and Raymond Robson all of Chicago, Robert Kreuger and son and a friend of Blue Island were some of the early birds that were quite successful.

Mr. and Mrs. J. DeBacher of Chicago who recently purchased the McDonough home on Powell Road, are getting settled for the winter.

All schools were closed in Palos on Tuesday in observance of Armistice Day.

Nov. 15th it to be another big night in Palos when the Civic Club will hold their card party and turkey bazaar at the Village Hall. Twenty-five door prizes of permanent waves and tooth brushes, powder and many articles too numerous to mention have already been given to the club and many more are coming in every day. Table prizes will also be awarded and one can play any kind of cards that one may wish. So for another enjoyable evening in Palos plan to attend. This affair is for the benefit of the Christmas fund, so your co-operation will be greatly appreciated to help those less fortunate than ourselves to have a good Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Willard of Joliet and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Powell were guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Powell Friday night.

Many Palosites attended the Legion dance at Goodings Grove Saturday night.

Major and Mrs. John Tilsey of Louisiana are visiting at the home of the former's sisters, Edith and Julia.

Many Palos people attended the Farm-Bureau-Country Life Insurance Company Jubilee Wednesday night held in the Masonic Temple in Blue Island. Among them were: Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Powell and family, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Maccauley, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Powell, Mrs. Frank Yunker and Mrs. Irving Pronger who acted as a cake judge. There were over fifty cakes entered in the contest. Twenty five beauty contest winners were present, all kinds of entertainment and community singing helped make it an enjoyable evening for all.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY DEPT.

Oscar Strand celebrated his birthday last Wednesday. I am told that his cake wouldn't hold a candle for every year so they compromised and put on one giant candle. Those present in the evening to enjoy cards and cake were: Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Cooper and family of Orland, and Mr. and Mrs. Manning Strand and family of Lemont.

Sonny Adams celebrated his ninth birthday Friday with a party held in his honor at his home. The pupils of McCord School were invited and all enjoyed playing games and eating a delicious lunch. Among those present were Frank and Paul Sanders, Shirley, Phyllis and Donna Treadway, Gene and Patsy Adams and Mrs. A. Burnette the teacher from Chicago. Happy birthday to Mr. Strand and Sonny and many more of them.

Dorothy Robson appeared in a WLS Show in Downers Grove Tuesday and Wednesday night and in Dolton on Thursday and Friday nights.

The Red Cross Work Class held their regular meeting at the Village Hall on Monday.

The Civic Council met Monday night in the Village Hall for their regular stated meeting.

The John Murray family have moved back in this vicinity again. They moved to Lemont about two years ago when their home in the Forest Preserve on 104th avenue was torn down. They have moved in the home that formerly was owned by Ted Kramer on 131st St. The children will soon become pupils of the McCord school.

Dorothy Robson found a model airplane in a cornfield adjoining her home Monday afternoon. The plane belongs to a man in Cleveland, Ohio and was entered in a contest in May. Shirley Treadway says she found one in the Forest Preserve in back of her home on the Fourth of July and wrote to the man who owned it and he rewarded her with $5. Dorothy is going to get in touch with the man and see if he wants the plane mailed back to him. It was badly damaged and may not be of any use, but she figures that there is no harm in trying.

FRANKFORT

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Krusmark celebrated their 62nd wedding anniversary Nov. 6th. They spent the day very quietly. Regardless of age, they attended the chicken supper. They are remarkably active. They surely are blessed with health and a long journey of wedded life.

Richard Lambrecht is recovering from a tonsil operation he underwent last week.

Fred Kohlhausen is suffering from an attack of neuritis.

Robert Mitchell, son of Mrs. Blanche Mitchell, surprised her by calling from Chicago to inform her that he had the opportunity to spend a day with her because co-fliers of his came this way. Robert is expecting to be in army maneuvers in South Carolina.

Virgil Lorenzen has been placed in Sheppard Field, Wichita Falls, Texas for his air training in the army. Raymond Smith has been sent to Camp Roberts, California for his army duties.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Knobel of Lemont are the parents of a daughter born Nov. 2nd in Silver Cross hospital. Mrs. Knobel is well known here as the former Pearl Christian-sen.

The Gleaners will sponsor a dance in the Frankfort gym Thanksgiving night, Nov. 20.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Kohlhausen, Russell and Annette and Miss Marjorie Hasenjaeger were dinner guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Harnack in New Lenox Sunday.

The Amite Sewing Club will be entertained in the home of Mrs. Herbert Kohlhausen Nov. 18.

Mr. Albert Krusemark, Sr., and son Albert spent Saturday in Champaign in honor of the yearly Dad's Day at the University of Illinois. During their stay they attended the football game of Illinois vs. Iowa. In the evening they had the pleasure of attending the banquet given in honor of the day by the Delta Delta Delta Sorority of which Miss Corrine Krusemark is a member.

Virginia Warning and Annette Kohlhausen who are students of I. S. N. U., spent last week here with their parents.

The Martha Sewing Club of St. Peter's Ev. and Ref. church met on Thursday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Dingle, Robert Menick and Miss Jean Wolf of Elgin and Mr. and Mrs. Burton Breidert were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kohlhausen Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Harnack, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Brueggemann, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Batson spent Sunday night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dorbin in Blue Island. A supper was served by the hostess after which a social evening was spent playing pinocle with Mr. and Mrs. Batson receiving high honors and Alvin Brueggemann the traveling award.

Miss Jean Russo of Chicago spent Thursday and Friday with Miss Louise Scheer. They are co-workers in the men's department of the radio and sound division of the Jefferson Electric Corporation in Bellwood.

Arthur Lambrecht is ill in his home.

John Harnack spent a few days of last week in Mississippi. He made the trip by airplane.

Delbert Seemann figured in an auto accident Monday night in which he sustained a fractured back.

Lincoln Estates

Mr. Chas. Wright is a patient in the Silver Cross Hospital.

Lois Srageau spent the week end with her cousins Shirley and Leana Grimes.

Mrs. Wm. Lockwood spent last week end with her daughter Mrs. Pickford who lives in Homewood.

Mrs. Martha Hall of Joliet was a week end guest of Mrs. Elizabeth Walker.

James King and Junior Anderson of Joliet visited in the Ed. Schoen home the past week.

So far—so good!

RIGHT NOW, Illinois Bell telephones are handling millions of calls more each week than last year.

To help keep the service up to standard, your telephone company has had to spend this year some $30,000,000 for new lines and new equipment as well as increasingly larger amounts for maintenance and operation.

As we reach these higher peaks, we face, like almost every one else, the question of adequate supply of materials. Most telephone equipment is salvaged for reuse, and wherever possible we have developed substitutes for those materials needed in national defense. Our aim, as always, is to maintain the best possible telephone service, and we are glad we can still say "So far—so good."

Illinois Bell Telephone Company

Threat to the Press

The greatest threat to our vaunted freedom of the press is not the possibility of censorship. Rather it is the imposition of unnecessary economic controls masquerading as steps in the national defense interest.

So far the threat has been directed at the advertising department. The Attorney General sent a questionnaire to many advertisers to find out how much and in what ways they spent money, and for what purposes. It has been proposed in Washington that brand names be eliminated, and that articles be sold as soap candy or what have you. This, of course would virtually kill advertising. And without advertising support the cost of a newspaper would be out of reach to most buyers.

There is a very general impression that advertising adds considerably to the retail price of goods. The fact is that when it has been intelligently used to increase the sale of articles in common use, it has resulted in improving the quality and lowering the price. Some interesting testimony on that phase of advertising was given before the House Judiciary Committee by W. S. Farish, president of Standard Oil Company N.J., which spends millions each year in advertising. He told the Committee:

"Although the sums expended for advertising by some companies are large, it is easy to exaggerate the part of the customer's gasoline dollar which is spent for advertising. If all the advertising expenditures of the industry were charged to gasoline alone, it is probable that they would represent less than a quarter of a cent per gallon."

As a matter of fact, a large proportion of the advertising money has been applied to other products and services. Even if it were all covered in the price of gasoline, it would not mean much to a motorist who learned that on a purchase of ten gallons, he had contributed 2 1-2 cents for advertising and 60 cents for State and Federal sales taxes.

Husking Contest Was Great Event

Determined not to lose out in their husking contest and after much delay, the contestants all agreed they would be willing to face all the disadvantages that rain and mud offered and the contest was run off in record time Monday afternoon, October 27.

Mr. C. A. Burch, manager of the Walter Senne farm gave the huskers permission to go into the field since they had made every possible effort to find a suitable time. About 10 o'clock a number of farmers were called to act as gleaners and judges of the contest and by 2 o'clock about 200 or 300 had gathered to watch the contest. The Arlington Park Jockey club was called and Mr. Jackson responded by loaning the maintenance teams of the Arlington Park Jockey club and the O. S. Caesar team of Barrington to pull the wagons in the field. These fine teams made an outstanding display in the value of horses in a mechanical age. It would have been impossible for tractors to go through the fields at this time. At 2 p.m. the contest was started and for 80 minutes the contestants labored through water mud and rain to pile up the best possible record they could. The contestants and the amount of corn that was shucked after all deductions were as follows:

Harold Lyle, 37.1 bu., Laverne Roesslein, 34.1 bu., Paul Malchow, 32.1 bu., Lanhardt Roesslein, 29.7 bu. Robt. Freise, 29.0 bu., Lloyd Bonkoski, 27.6 bu., Ted Hill, 24.3 bu., Leroy Roesslein, 22.3 b.

Perhaps conditions could not have been more difficult for a husking contest but because of the good sportsmanship shown by the contestants and the farmers who assisted, and the owners of the horses and particularly by Mr. Burch and the Walter Senne farm, this contest was carried out in a very satisfactory manner.

Mr. Lyle's record was phoned into the Prairie Farmer as a contestant in the State contest. It is believed if the weather had been at all favorable that at least five bushels more corn could have been husked and Lyle would have stood close to the top of any records that have been made in the state thus far.

The field of corn was a particularly good field of DeKalb hybrid. After the contest the contestants and drivers of the teams went to Krueger's Restaurant at Rand and Dundee Rds. for dinner.

Constitution And Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln lived his entire life without seeing the Constitution of the United States amended once, Dr. L. A. Warren, director of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company's Lincoln Museum, stated in discussing Lincoln and the Constitution. Dr. Warren pointed out that Lincoln's attitude toward changing the Constitution is reflected in his statement, "New provisions would introduce new difficulties, and thus create an increased appetite for further change."

In the light of Lincoln's prophecy, that "an increased appetite for further change" would result from new provisions, it is interesting to note that during the 68 year period between 1865 when the 13th amendment was added, and 1933, when the 21st became law, a total of nine amendments were added to the Constitution. This contrasts with the previous 61 year period when no changes were made.

Lincoln did recognize, however, that we should not "follow explicitly" in what our fathers did when he said, with reference to revision of the Constitution, "If we should supplant the opinions and policy of our fathers in any case, we should do so upon evidence so conclusive, and argument so clear, that even their great authority, fairly considered and weighed, cannot stand."

Soldier's Medal

The Soldier's Medal for heroism has been awarded to Private First Class Peter Schur, a native of Benld, Illinois, it was announced today by Major General J. M. Cummins, commanding the Sixth Corps Area with headquarters in Chicago, on receipt of word from the War Department.

On duty with the 20th Air Base Squadron, Air Corps, at Manila, Schur was cited for heroism displayed in rescuing an enlisted man from drowning in the waters of Manila Bay on February 28, 1941. When the United States Army Transport "U. S. Grant" was pulling out from the dock, an enlisted man fell overboard from the troop deck and, being partially stunned by the fall, was in grave danger of drowning. Upon seeing his predicament, Private First Class Schur who was on duty in a crash boat nearby, with utter disregard of his own safety, immediately jumped into the shark infested waters, and with great difficulty succeeded in bringing the helpless man to the surface where he was assisted to a place of safety, thereby, saving his life.

Stock Show To Be Finest In Years

America's finest farm animals from the farthestmost sections of the continent, as well as from the Cornbelt and Chicagoland, will be gathered in Chicago's International Amphitheatre the last of this month for the opening of the country's largest annual showing of the finest products of farm and ranch, the International Live Stock exposition and Horse show.

The Exposition will be on from November 29 to December 6, marking the 42nd annual renewal of this celebrated event.

Officials of the show report that earlier predictions that the total number of animals exhibited this year would exceed the 12,000 mark have been realized after a preliminary tally of the entries which closed on November 1.

This year's prize winners will be picked by 5 judges from 20 states and Canada, the management announces. They will name the winners in the contests of the week that will feature 26 different breeds of farm animals, pleasure horses and a variety of farm crops.

Chief task among the judging assignments is that of selecting the grand champion steer, most celebrated bovine winner of the year, from among the thousand or more top notch beeves that will be exhibited by live stock experts, young and old, of this country and Canada.

A well known Canadian stockman, W. L. Carlyle of Calgary, Alberta, will judge the steer classes at the coming show, culminating his two day judging with the grand champion. Mr. Carlyle is manager of the Duke of Windsor's ranch.

Orland Park School News

High above our school in the crisp, autumn air its bright colors deadening the brilliantly hued leaves, flies the school's new flag. Our students are very proud of it. They are enthusiastic too about the new laboratory. The new "lab" tables are made by the Kimball piano people. These tables are very modern in design with running water, gas and electricity for each student.

A great improvement over the old lab tables are the acid resisting tops with bottle niches to prevent the overturning of acids. The faucets fold down into the sink which have covers giving the tables flat tops, convenient for note taking. Higher than conventional tables and lower than the old fashioned kind the new "lab" tables are easy to work on and beautiful to see.

Chairs which go with the tables are of entirely new type, higher than usual with low backs, comfortable both for work and relaxed posture.

Fluorescent lighting highly praised by doctors and used by engineers in making fine drawings. We have now installed in the industrial planning and agriculture room. The modern type lights greatly reduce current consumption and so pay for themselves.

Badge of Patriotism

Because of greatly increased responsibilities in the national defense program the Red Cross has appealed to the nation for a 1941 membership comparable to that of the first World War when more than 18,000,000 adult Americans gave their support. Membership in the Red Cross is more than a sentimental indorsement of good will. The entire machinery of Red Cross peacetime operations has been geared into a vital part of our military and civilian defenses. Red Cross membership dollars thus are transformed into a tangible means of protecting the American way of life.

The Red Cross is on the job with the Army and Navy here and abroad, providing an important link of communication between the service men and the family back home. With 2,000,000 men under arms this task has grown almost tenfold. The corps of Red Cross field directors is assisting with experienced counsel and with financial aid to solve the problems of our service men and their families back home.

Red Cross volunteers are giving their blood for emergency transfusions in the Army and Navy. In the coming year some 10,000 Red Cross nurses will have been inducted for military and naval service. Uniformed volunteers are nearing completion of 40,000,000 surgical dressings requested by the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy.

For its part in the civilian defense program, the Red Cross has undertaken the training of 1000,000 Nurse's Aides, an auxiliary corps of volunteers to help relieve the current shortage of registered nurses. During the coming year 1,000,000 men and women will be taught Red Cross first aid as a civilian preparedness measure. Disaster relief preparedness is being widened to meet the challenge of sabotage, fire, explosions and to stand as a backlog of readiness in the event of sporadic bombing or armed invasion. Nutrition and Home Nursing courses will be extended to additional thousands as protective health measure.

These are the reasons why the Red Cross asks your support this year. Your membership button is a badge of patriotism, a way you can express your belief in America.

TINLEY PTA

The Parent Teachers Association held their November meeting last Friday evening at the school auditorium. It was "Father's Night" and in spite of the bad weather there was a large attendance of interested parents.

Mr. Fierke, the principal of the school gave a most interesting talk on the various activities that were put into effect this year and he and the teachers should certainly be commended on the results even at this early date.

Each activity group gave their demonstration exactly as they work each day. They were unrehearsed and no effort was made to add any special touches or make it any different from what they do each day, so the parents know exactly how the child works daily in this activity period.

Refreshments were served by the second grade mothers and they certainly did themselves proud. Such beautiful cakes. Every one seemed to enjoy themselves immensely.

—Anne Trevarthen, Pub. chair.

Amelia E. Cavett and Emma G. Tate were the guests of Mrs. Jesse A. Hartwick and Miss Emily Riefstahl at the Fifth annual party and Fashion Show of the Chicago Teachers Union which was held at the Stevens hotel, Chicago, Saturday afternoon November 8.

TINLEY SCHOOL NEWS

This week has been set aside as National Education week. This grew out of the first World War when it was found that 25 percent of the men examined in the draft were illiterate. It was felt that a program of public information was needed to correct the situation. The initiative for the movement was taken by the American Legion and American Education Week is now sponsored jointly by the National Education Assoc., the American Legion, the U. S. Office of Education and the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The future of our country depends upon education. There are untold fields of development. There is no limit as to where you may go in developing the resources of our great country. One fact all should be interested in is that of safeguarding school support.

Since the great depression financing the schools has been a difficult problem. Today the defense program is taking an increasing share of the national income. We should not sacrifice the schools because of it.

When the defense program ends we will be faced with many problems and education will be called upon to help solve those problems.

This week a school system in Illinois is closing its doors for eight weeks because the people of the community have not recognized the services of the school system and have not provided for its financial support. That community is now faced with the problem of caring for 13,000 children. This community is building factories of many millions of dollars, they are operating 24 hours a day and the schools must close because of lack of funds. Let us consider as a fact that public education in the U. S. is costing only 10 cents per day to each person of voting age.

Parents have been especially invited to attend and visit the schools this week so that they may better understand what their children are doing in school. However we should not take just a week for this type of program and therefore the invitation to parents to visit the Tinley Park school is a standing one. The parents will always find the welcome sign upon the door.

Let us unite in supporting our school, financially, morally and socially not only during National Education week but during every week of the school. Through continued support of this kind we shall all be educating for a stronger America.

The Primary Dept. is endeavoring thru its new reading program to provide a series of purposeful activities which by their very nature prepare pupils for reading. The picture stories and work pages are organized around interest centers relating to pets, toys work and play at home trips to the farm and zoo.

ZUR ERINNERUNG

In Liebe gedenken wir heute an meinen geliebten Gatten und unseren lieben Vater George Schanz, Welcher heute vor zwei Jahren, am 14. November 1939, von uns geschieden ist. LET THE GOBBLER STRUT ITS STUFF!
(See Recipes Below)

THANKSGIVING

This holiday is ours! As you bustle about and plan this year's Thanksgiving dinner, remember this is the day we give our thanks for the bounteous harvest of the year, for the peace and the prosperity, singularly ours. Remember, too, and cherish the fore-sight of the Pilgrims who had the courage to start carving out this land of ours!

Yes, this holiday is ours, so let it be filled with the spirit of the day and wholehearted thanks.

Some foods are synonymous with Thanksgiving without which the day wouldn't be complete, but don't get into a rut about having the same dinner every year, vary the trimmings a bit and fascinate the family.

Thin wisps of croutons will intrigue if you serve them in the oyster stew.

*Oyster Stew.

(Serves 6 to 8)
1 pint oysters
4 tablespoons butter
1 quart milk
Salt and pepper

Put cleaned oysters, oyster liquor strained, butter and seasonings in a saucepan and simmer gently until oysters curl at the edges. Heat the milk, add to the oysters and serve at once.

Has the family become a trifle weary of your old stuffing? Then try this savory new one with yummy sausage flavoring which is right at home with either turkey, goose, duck or chicken. The sausage stuffing will do a proud job with stuffed veal, pork or shoulder of lamb:

*Sausage Stuffing.

(Makes 6 cups)
4 cups soft bread crumbs
½ cup butter
3 tablespoons chopped onion
½ teaspoon salt
Pepper
½ teaspoon sage or thyme
½ cup chopped celery
2 cups sausage in the bulk

Melt butter, add onion and cook until it becomes yellow. Add bread crumbs mixed with seasonings. Mix in chopped celery and sausage. Cook 2 minutes, stirring constantly.

*Turkey.

Small birds are allowed 25 to 30 minutes per pound for baking, large birds, 22 to 25 minutes per pound. Your oven should be set at 325 to 350 degrees.

*Sweet Potato Puff.

(Serves 10 to 12)
4 cups mashed sweet potato
2 tablespoons fat
1 egg

LYNN SAYS:

To clean the turkey, singe it first, then remove the pin feathers with tweezers. Scrub the outside with water. The inside should be wiped with a damp cloth. If there is any foreign odor, a half teaspoon of baking soda may be added to the water with which the turkey is scrubbed.

Allow 1 pound of turkey to each person. Allow 1 cup of stuffing to each pound of turkey. When stuffing, be sure to put some in the neck for this will give the bird a good full shape. Fasten the skin from the neck to the back. Stuff the cavity but do not pack since dressing swells.

For good roasting and easier carving truss the bird, by inserting a long needle through breast, through rib at the base of the thigh. Draw the cord through and bring the string across by pulling the cord through the openings formed by folding the wings triangularly onto the back. Tie the cords.

Insert the needle through the drumstick joints, bring the cord around the tail, through the backbone, and tie securely. Remove cord before serving.

THIS WEEK'S MENU

*Oyster Stew Croutons
*Roast Turkey
*Sausage Stuffing
*Cranberry-Orange Relish
*Sweet Potato Puff
*Brussels Sprouts
*Hot Rolls
Celery Curls Pickled Beets
*Pumpkin or Mincemeat Tarts
Hot Coffee
*Recipe Given

Salt and pepper
½ cup milk or ¼ cup evaporated milk and ¼ cup water.

Add the melted fat, seasonings and milk to the potatoes. Beat the egg separately, add yolk first and fold in white to the potato. Place in a buttered casserole dish, set in a pan containing hot water and bake 15 to 20 minutes at 375 degrees until light and puffy. Marshmallows may be placed on top of casserole during last 7 minutes of baking time. With all the soft food of the meal, you'll want something crispy and tart as a relish.

*Cranberry-Orange Relish.

(Serves 12)
2 cups cranberries, cleaned, washed
2 oranges, whole
1 cup sugar

Grind all the fruit together by putting through a coarse food grinder. Mix the ground fruit with sugar and let stand about an hour before serving.

*Brussels Sprouts.

Brussels sprouts lend a bright touch of green when served plain with butter or crumbled, cooked chestnuts. Pick the dead leaves off the sprouts, then soak them in cold salted water for ½ hour. Wash and put in boiling water and let cook until just tender, about 15 to 17 minutes. Drain, reheat, and serve after seasoning.

*Magic Yeast Rolls.

3 cups bread flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup butter
3 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup sugar (rolled in later)
1 tablespoon sugar
1 cup chopped nuts
½ cup milk
¼ cup hot water
2 packages granular yeast

Sift flour. Add to 1½ cups of flour the salt and shortening. Combine as for pie crust. Combine milk and hot water. When lukewarm, add yeast and 1 tablespoon sugar. Combine with first mixture; beat until smooth. Cover and let stand 20 minutes. Add eggs, vanilla and the rest of the flour. Stir until it becomes a smooth, sticky dough, but stiff. Tie dough into a clean cloth (wring out in cold water first). Drop in a pan of cold water. In an hour the dough will rise to the top. Remove and turn on a platter and cut into pieces the size of an egg. Roll in sugar and nut mixture. Twist into figure eights. Shape and turn onto a greased pan. Let stand 5 minutes and bake 10 minutes at 425 degrees F.

Remember how mother used to make her pumpkin pie and tarts the day before and how good they always tasted after they stood in the cool pantry overnight? Why not try it this time? It'll save you a great deal of fuss on the big day itself besides giving the tarts a chance to mellow and ripen for extra good flavor.

*Pumpkin Filling.

(Makes 1 large pie or 10 to 12 tarts)
1½ cups prepared pumpkin
¾ cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1½ cups milk

For fresh pumpkin, steam or bake until soft and put through a sieve. Add remaining ingredients in order given. Turn into crust lined pie tin or tart pans and bake first in a very hot (450 degrees) oven, then reduce temperature to 325 degrees and bake 25 minutes.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

IMAGINARY DIALOGUES: MRS. ROOSEVELT AND THE OCD CHIEF

("Mrs. Roosevelt takes office as assistant to Fiorello LaGuardia, director of the Office of Civilian Defense."—News item.)

Mrs. Roosevelt (making her first appearance)—Good morning, boss. Mr. LaGuardia—Good morning. What can I do for you?

Mrs. Roosevelt—I'm the new girl here. Roosevelt is the name.

Mr. LaGuardia—Oh, yes. I remember. Let's see . . . just what were you to do?

Mrs. Roosevelt—You just said to report as your assistant.

Mr. LaGuardia—So I did! Well, are you all set?

Mrs. Roosevelt—I'm willing to give you all my spare time. Mr. LaGuardia—Come, come! You'll have to do better than that!

Mrs. Roosevelt—Dear me! If it isn't one thing it's another these days!

Mr. LaGuardia—If it isn't ONE thing it's A DOZEN OTHERS!

Mrs. Roosevelt—I don't see how you get time to attend to so many matters in so many places.

Mr. LaGuardia—I'm puzzled about you in the same way. Gosh, I guess we are the four busiest people in America.

Mrs. Roosevelt—Four? There are only two of us.

Mr. LaGuardia—Let's not belittle ourselves!

Mrs. Roosevelt—I'm very anxious to get going.

Mr. LaGuardia (whipping out a bunch of timetables)—So am I.

Mrs. Roosevelt—I mean to get going here . . . on the new job.

Mr. LaGuardia—Oh, yes. My error. Let's see what the set-up is. I'm head of the OCD and I need help.

Mrs. Roosevelt—Fancy Fiorello LaGuardia needing help!

Mr. LaGuardia—It does seem fanciful, I admit. But I need a deputy and I thought of you, as the First Lady of the Land and such a great worker in so many causes, would be of great help.

Mrs. Roosevelt—What can I do that you can't do?

Mr. LaGuardia—Well, a daily column for one thing. And you have a radio sponsor, too. I heard you on the air. I went right out and bought some of that tea.

Mrs. Roosevelt—I spoke for a coffee program.

Mr. LaGuardia—Sorry! It must have been a bad reception on my radio set.

Mrs. Roosevelt—I've often wondered why you didn't do a newspaper column yourself.

Mr. LaGuardia—I guess the papers don't use that kind of language. But I've had a radio offer.

Mrs. Roosevelt—From a sponsor? Who?

Mr. LaGuardia—A cigarette company. It wanted some new noises for the Modern Design theme.

Mrs. Roosevelt—Are you going to accept?

Mr. LaGuardia—No. My doctor thinks I am doing too much already.

Mrs. Roosevelt—I don't blame him from worrying about the strain on you.

Mr. LaGuardia—That isn't it. He's worrying over the strain on him in worrying about the strain on me. To get back to business, do you think you understand just what our job requires.

Mrs. Roosevelt—Hark!

Mr. LaGuardia—What is it?

Mrs. Roosevelt—I thought I heard enemy bombers overhead.

Mr. LaGuardia—Excellent. You get the whole idea exactly!

CAN YOU REMEMBER—

Away back when people could always find out whether they were in a war or not without much trouble?

"Does anyone ever see a picture of life in Russia under Bloody Joe Stalin?" Senator Clark at the movie inquiry.

Well, if the senator was any kind of a movie fan he would know that the answer is "Yes, indeed." In fact the Russian picture is something that the public got fed up with long ago.

Ocean Their Mail Box

Because St. Kilda, an island off Scotland, was inaccessible most of the year, its citizens, before their evacuation about a decade ago, used to "post" their letters in sheepskin bags and toss them into the ocean. Some were picked up by ships, others were carried by a current 500 miles across the North sea to the coast of Norway, where they were found and their contents mailed.

When the shopping list is long, and the purse none too full, cigarettes and smoking tobacco come to the front as ideal gifts for the holiday season. The welcome they get from any smoker is all out of proportion to their modest cost. That's why Camel—America's favorite cigarette, and Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco—the National Joy Smoke—rank as leading gifts on the Christmas shopping lists. Dealers are featuring the Camel carton—ten packs of "20's"—and a novel Camel package of four "flat fifties," also Prince Albert in the pound tin and the pound glass humidor—all specially gift packaged.—Adv.

Come-Back

"Hullo! I hear you've got married?"

"Yes, I got tired of restaurant food."

"And now?"

"I'm beginning to like it again."

Using the Moment

The door-to-door salesman was not at all welcome.

"If you are not off my doorstep in thirty seconds," said the householder, "I'll . . ."

"Now, what can I sell you in half a minute?" replied the salesman cheerfully.

A broad-minded man is one who is always open to conviction but who would like to meet the man who could convince him.

Long, Long Trail

Peering closely into her client's hand, the fortune-teller "did her stuff."

"There's a dark woman following your husband," she said.

"Oh, well," replied the good lady calmly; "she'll soon get tired of that. My husband's a postman."

Bulbs Bloom All Winter
If You Start Them Now

A SUCCESSION of lovely blooms in your home all winter! That's your reward—if you start potting bulbs now.

Clever to choose stunning "show pieces" that flower at different periods—white callas start blooming in January, colorful amaryllis and daffodils a little later.

Before these and in between you can always have the fragrant narcissus. Just start a fresh batch every two weeks in a bowl of water and pebbles. Keep in a dark spot until growth starts and be sure the lower third of each bulb is in water.

Our 32-page booklet tells how to raise favorite flowering and foliage plants, ferns, bracket plants. Tells how to pot bulbs, also how to grow bulbs, vines and other material in water. Send your order to:

Blameless Life

If thou wouldst pass a blameless life, turn away from law and statecraft, and study the book of Nature that God hath spread out before thee, and so thou wilt store up knowledge in thy brain and peace within thy heart.—Euripides.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.
